Che would 'have been delighted' with T-shirts, says daughter

CUBA The ubiquitous exploitation of Che Guevara's image on T-shirts and paraphernalia would have made the revolutionary laugh, his daughter said.

"He probably would have been delighted to see his face on the breasts of so many beautiful women," joked Dr. Aleida Guevara.

She and Manuel Yepe, one of the revolutionary's close associates, paid a visit to Vancouver this weekend for a two-day conference on issues facing Cuba.

"I'm very happy to be here ... and I believe that solidarity (with Cuba and these political prisoners) is an expression of the tenderness of the people," Guevara told a group of onlookers outside the Russian Halls on Campbell Avenue, near Vancouver's Chinatown.

She went on to denounce the blockade of Cuba by the United States, and the continued existence of the Guantanamo Bay detention facility. KYLE FARQUHARSON/ FOR METRO VANCOUVER

Protests turn Toronto into part police state, part riot zone

G20 Summit

Police cracked down hard on G20 dissent yesterday in the wake of violent protests that saw downtown Toronto transformed into part police state, part riot zone over the weekend.

After a day of carnage that gripped the city and resulted in more than 600 arrests, police were left with little choice but to switch gears, said one security expert.

Police arrested people one-by-one after hemming in a crowd on all four sides in a downtown intersection. Passersby who were not taking part in the march, and several journalists, were hemmed in as well.

A seemingly peaceful protest earlier in the day, outside a film studio being used as detention centre for G20 protesters, was quickly put down by a flood of riot police.

A bike rally across town was similarly set upon by police.

It was a deliberate change in tactics, said Michel Juneau-Katsuya, a security expert based in Ottawa.

"They gave a chance to people to calm down (on Saturday) — it didn't work, so the strategy totally changed," Juneau-Katsuya said.

"It's also a way to send a message to the demonstrators and telling them, 'Hey, enough is enough. We are not going to tolerate this. That's why we're ramping it up.'" THE CANADIAN PRESS

- A much smaller protest against the G20 summit was held Saturday in Vancouver. Police said no one was injured, nor arrested, despite the efforts of protesters to bait officers, poking them with signs and kicking at them.

$150K Ming Dynasty work stolen

KRISTEN THOMPSON
kristen.thompson@metronews.ca

RICHMOND Two armed thieves held up a Richmond art store and made off with a 16th-century Ming Dynasty painting worth roughly $150,000, police said yesterday.

The suspects — clad in yellow security jackets and ball caps — robbed Chinese Painting Canada Ltd. in Yaohan Mall on Saturday.

They made off with a piece of art believed to be by painter Lan Ying, said RCMP Cpl. Sherrdean Turley.

Stolen painting

"At this time it is not known whether or not this is the original painting, however it has been passed down for many generations and is valued at approximately $150,000," said Turley.

The thieves also stole two jade Buddha statues of unknown value and a Chinese calligraphy piece.

"The writing was also part of the family heritage and was written by Shi Kai Yuan, the first elected president of China," Turley said. "The owner estimates the value to be approximately $50,000."

The store did not want to comment.

Gulf leak spurs talks on tanker traffic

RAGNAR HAAGEN
for Metro Vancouver

COUNCIL In wake of the massive oil leak in the Gulf of Mexico, local concerns are being raised about increased oil tanker traffic through Burrard Inlet.

Vancouver Mayor Gregor Robertson has announced a special council meeting to address these issues on July 5.

"We need to make sure we're doing everything we can to protect our coastline, our marine life and our economy," Robertson said in a press release.

A number of experts will be on hand to address council on the issue, including members of B.C. Chamber of Shipping, Ministry of Environment and a local oceanographer.

Christianne Wilhelmson, of the Georgia Strait Alliance, is also aware of the concerns and said that the public should be more informed on the topic.

"What has happened the last 10 years is a dramatic increase in the transportation of crude oil and tar sands products out of the Vancouver ports," Wilhelmson said. "With increased tanker traffic, with the frequency of trips, as well as the size (of the tankers), the risk of a catastrophic accident increases, and there has been no discussion on a community level."

William Shatner and Leonard Nimoy were cheered — and Jar Jar Binks ferociously booed — at Vancouver's Star Trek Convention yesterday.

The pair, who played the iconic Capt. James T. Kirk and Mr. Spock, discussed their current projects and answered fan questions. Shatner even talked about his experience at the hockey final of the 2010 Olympics.

Multiple generations of Trekkies turned up to the Sheraton Wall Centre Hotel this weekend to hear Shatner and Nimoy speak — among them longtime fans Diana and Keely Park, both in costume.

"I've always liked science fiction, and I used to watch the original show with my dad," Diana said. Thanks to the continuity of the franchise, she said she is grateful to share an affinity for Star Trek with her daughter.

Barry Jenner, who played Admiral William Ross in Seasons 6 and 7 of Star Trek: Deep Space Nine, said the cast of his show has the feel of a fraternity. However, he admitted that at times recognizing some actors in their human form has been challenging.

"I met one guy that I had worked with for six months, and I recognized his voice, which was very distinctive, but not his face," said Jenner.

As it turned out, he explained, that person was Michael Dorn, who played the part of humanoid Lt.-Cmdr. Worf.

Protests, politics make world's headlines

G20 Summit

Violent protests competed with weighty issues like the global economy in the Sunday headlines of the international media covering the G20 summit.

Media outlets from many countries ran prominent stories about the roving group of masked protesters who splintered from a larger, peaceful protest Saturday to smash windows and set several police cruisers on fire. Yesterday, the situation remained tense with police taking no chances.

While the world's leaders continued their talks ensconced behind two high security fences, international media were tasked with juggling protests with politics as they turned their lenses on the city's usually peaceful streets.

"The streets of Toronto have become a battlefield," wrote the New York Daily News.

"Violence, vandalism rock G-20 protests," declared a CNN headline.

"Black Bloc tactics mar Canada's G-20 summit," said another newspaper.

In Britain, The Guardian's coverage of the riot was the top international story on the newspaper's website.

PM doesn't move to kill oil tax breaks

G20 Prime Minister Stephen Harper rejected advice from his officials to eliminate tax incentives for the oil patch on a weekend that saw the world's most powerful leaders disdain fresh attempts to combat climate change in favour of fighting deepening deficits.

The G20 countries promised at their last meeting in Pittsburgh to examine where governments were subsidizing fossil fuel consumption and production and then move to eliminate those subsidies.

U.S. President Barack Obama's told fellow leaders in a letter last week that he wanted to see his summit colleagues make progress on the issue.

But the entire G20 opted to do little on fossil fuel subsidies and pay lip service to the issue of climate change that had seized centre stage of these summits. The Department of Finance recommended over the spring that Harper lead by example and get rid of tax incentives that encourage oil and gas production. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Spill safe from tropical storm — for now

A tropical depression slamming into parts of Mexico isn't taking aim at the massive Gulf oil spill — for now — though any system can quickly change course and send cleanup efforts grinding to a halt.

The logistics of containing the oil spewing into the Gulf of Mexico are mind-boggling even in ideal conditions.

Things become even more complicated with the approach of a storm system like Alex, which has pelted Belize, northern Guatemala and Mexico's Yucatan Peninsula with heavy rain.

Any system with winds over 74 km/h could force BP PLC to abandon efforts to contain the flow for up to two weeks and delay the drilling of two relief wells that are the best hope of stopping it, Coast Guard Adm. Thad Allen said Saturday, shortly after Alex became the first tropical storm of the Atlantic hurricane season. It has since weakened to a tropical depression.

However, forecasters say Alex will cross over the Yucatan Peninsula back into the Gulf, where the warm waters could fuel it up to hurricane strength.

It's projected to hit Mexico again south of Texas and miss the spill site, but officials are watching closely.

"We all know the weather is unpredictable and we could have a sudden, last-minute change," Allen said.

Nearly 39,000 people and more than 6,000 boats are working to skim and corral the oil, protect hundreds of kilometres of coastline and clean fouled beaches.

All of those efforts would have to be suspended if a storm threatened.

Alex kills two in Guatemala

WEATHER Tropical Storm Alex weakened to a depression yesterday hours after making landfall in Belize City, but is expected to regain strength in the coming days as it moves out over warmer waters in the Gulf of Mexico.

Alex swept through the Yucatan Peninsula, northern Guatemala, and Belize with torrential downpours Saturday, killing two in Guatemala and forcing hundreds to flee. Winds were at 95 km/h when the storm made landfall but had decreased to 55 km/h by Sunday morning.

The heavy rains prompted a landslide in northwestern Guatemala that dislodged a large rock outcropping, killing two men who had taken shelter from the storm underneath, said officials from the national disaster-response agency.

Authorities in both Guatemala and Belize were keeping an eye on rising river levels. One bridge in western Belize was swamped entirely, cutting off a remote Mennonite community. Seven homes in the Belize River Valley had roofs blown off, and at least one structure collapsed. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

North Korea balks at UN talks

SINKING North Korea said yesterday it has rejected a proposal by the American-led UN Command to hold military talks on the deadly sinking of a South Korean warship blamed on Pyongyang.

The UN Command, which oversees the armistice that ended the three-year Korean War in 1953, has launched an investigation of the sinking.

A separate team of international investigators concluded last month that North Korea torpedoed the warship Cheonan near the tense Korean sea border. North Korea denied the allegation and has warned any punishment would trigger war.

Details of the UN Command's probe have not been released.

North Korea said yesterday the UN Command's armistice commission has sent it a message calling for general-level talks to inform the North of the results of its investigation.

"The U.S. imperialists" used the armistice commission to send a "ridiculous notice proposing general-level talks in order to brief it on its results," the North's official Korean Central News Agency said.

It said the results of the UN Command's probe would mimic the South Korean-led international investigation, which it said was "full of fabrication and plots." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CIA chief not worried

- CIA director Leon Panetta dismissed the North's recent threats, saying he does not expect military confrontation. For decades, "we've been going through these kinds of provocations and skirmishes with a rogue regime. In the end, they always back away from the brink and I think they'll do that now," Panetta told ABC's This Week.

Interim Kyrgyz government scores victory

ASIA The interim leaders of Kyrgyzstan said voters approved a new constitution yesterday that will allow the Central Asian nation to form a legitimate government after months of turmoil. President Roza Otunbayeva called the referendum a success, saying it took place without incident and paved the way for holding parliamentary elections in October.

The vote came just weeks after rampages against minority Uzbeks in southern Kyrgyzstan killed as many as 2,000 people and forced 400,000 ethnic Uzbeks to temporarily flee.

62% The Central Election Commission reported that nearly three-quarters of voters supported the constitution.

With just over 14 per cent of all precincts counted, the Central Election Commission said over 62 per cent voted for the new constitution to only seven per cent against it.

"We have passed the new constitution for our republic," Otunbayeva said. "It will not be an interim but a legal and legitimate government ... we are leaving the word 'interim' behind."

The vote — supported by the UN, the U.S. and Russia — was seen as an important step on the road to democracy and legitimization for the interim government, which came to power after former President Kurmanbek Bakiyev was ousted in April.

Urban gardens growing

InTransit

Derek Moscato
dmoscato@yahoo.com

Call it green fatigue, but I'm feeling overwhelmed these days by the surge of eco-friendly and ethically correct lifestyle and consumer choices vying for my daily attention. I'm talking about everything from 100-mile diets to free-range eggs to fruitarian dinners — not to mention the ominous issue of food security, or lack thereof. It's almost enough to scare me into a processed food retreat.

And, yet, on at least one sustainably correct culinary front, call me a convert. I'm referring to community gardening.

Last week, the garden of which I am a recently minted member, Queen Mary Community Garden, opened to much fanfare on the North Shore. The garden is a major success — and has become an attractive focal point for the North Van neighbourhood where it resides.

Yes, there were optimistic photo ops and political speeches on opening day, highlighting the environmental upside of the endeavour. But the real advantage is social. In a day and age when communities are increasingly disparate, and when residents of dense neighbourhoods hardly know their neighbours, these urban agriculture sites have the power to bring people together to exchange planting and composting notes and collectively take care of a property. In addition, many of these gardens, including Queen Mary, are cultivating crops for disadvantaged groups and food banks.

The catch? They have become too popular. There are waiting lists across Vancouver for plots. At one such site on Oak Street, a no vacancy sign adds insult to injury for would-be gardeners by declaring the waiting list is also full.

It's a situation that exists in other North American cities, unfortunately. Last year, a Portland resident became so fed up with waiting that he scouted out some vacant land and set up a gardening site of his own.

To this end, let's hope our government leaders can up the urban garden supply to placate exploding local demand.

Congratulations to Vancouver's Co-operative Auto Network, the homegrown car-sharing organization that recently celebrated an important milestone: Its one-millionth vehicle booking. And in an appropriate twist, the booking was made by none other than Greenpeace Canada.

Earlier this month, Zipcar, a U.S.-based competitor with operations in Vancouver, announced it would be going public on the New York Stock Exchange in a $75-million initial public offering.

Both developments are solid proof the car-sharing concept is here to stay.

Is this what democracy really looks like?

Peter McCartney

"This is what democracy looks like," chanted peaceful protesters, including myself, advocating a plethora of social issues on our march from Queen's Park to Queen and Spadina streets in Toronto during Saturday's start of the G20 meetings.

Sure enough, the so-called Black Bloc soon materialized; a menacing homogenous group of militants with the intent of doing as much damage as possible to draw police away from the infamous "gate."

They split from the main group once we arrived at a standoff with police and unleashed well-orchestrated mayhem upon corporate Toronto.

Meanwhile, Helter Skelter accompanied the tension as the main group of protesters had a unit of police surrounded around a smashed police cruiser.

Although police remained stoic and calm throughout, you could see a defined fear in their faces, followed by relief when another four units trickled in as backup.

After finally forcing the protesters back down Queen Street, riot police backed off at Peter Street, and as the main protest backtracked towards the financial district we discovered the anarchists' work.

Nearly every Starbucks and bank we passed sported broken windows and spray-painted walls, with security staff watching us intensely from inside, like we were an exhibit at the zoo.

It's an eerie feeling peering into a destroyed Starbucks where mere hours before a smiling barista cheerfully handed you a coffee.

Police and protesters spent the next few hours in an intersection-by-intersection power struggle to the sound of taunting chants and the authoritative strike of batons on shields in unison.

All while the Black Bloc tore through Yonge Street, smashing nearly every corporate business as store owners watched in horror.

And when they were finished, a simple wardrobe change let them rejoin the crowd undetected, while Torontonians were left to pick up the pieces, wondering if this really was what democracy is supposed to look like.

Peter McCartney, a native Calgarian, is an intern with Metro Calgary and is heading into his second year at Carleton University's journalism program.

Worth mentioning

Beauty, or ugliness, is in the eye of the beholder

A chihuahua's oddly curved back and legs and closed-up left eye earned the four-year-old rescue dog top honours at the World's Ugliest Dog contest at a Northern California fair Friday.

Sporting a grey, brown and black coat, Princess Abby Francis beat a rough-looking slate of candidates for the prize, including Pabst, a teeth-bearing boxer mix who won last year.

Princess Abby shivered in the cool breeze after her win while nestled in the arms of her owner, Kathleen Francis, who received a $1,000 cheque at the 22nd annual contest held at the Sonoma-Marin Fair in Petaluma.

The victory was a surprise to Francis.

"I don't think she's ugly at all," she said. "I think she's the most beautiful dog."

Francis says she adopted Princess Abby from her veterinarian about five months ago. This was the dog's first such contest since she was found running through the street.

Celebrity vet Karen (Doc) Halligan said the chihuahua's problematic back, legs and eye may be due to being inbred.

"She's a poster child to spay and neuter your pets," she said.

An uncertain future for cities

Sustainability study shows quality of life at risk of declining

BEN KNIGHT
for Metro Canada

Canadians living in big cities enjoy a high quality of life, but a new report suggests that may change if key sustainability issues are not quickly and effectively addressed.

The Sustainable Cities Challenge in Canada — conducted by GlobeScan and commissioned by Siemens Canada and the David Suzuki Foundation — polled experts across the nation on what the problems are, and how they should be rectified.

Here are some of the key findings:

TRANSPORTATION

What's the problem?

The report says decision making is fragmented, and projects can be deferred — or even dropped — during election years.

What's the solution?

"We see that there are bigger cities lacking good rail-based solutions, for example, between airports and city centres," says Roland Aurich, president and CEO of Siemans Canada Ltd.

"We have a long debate in Canada about high-speed rail. There is not yet a decision in that area, and we also see a lot of discussion about whether you should rely on bus lines or install light-rail traffic solutions. Again, the decision power is not in place. We do understand that these decisions need to be carefully based, but we also need to create a process where we do now take decisions needed for the future."

WATER QUALITY

What's the problem?

Infrastructure is old and crumbling, a problem that will only worsen if comprehensive rebuilding and expansion not undertaken.

What's the solution?

"First of all, we need to make sure we invest in our aging infrastructure," Aurich notes.

"In some cases, we see that the clear water which is produced doesn't come to the consumer. A portion gets lost in leakage. The second issue is to make sure that we also maintain and create capacity and quality — in a demanding way, and in an efficient way."

URBAN SPRAWL

What's the problem?

Cities expand to cover huge amounts of new land, but land-use and infrastructure concerns are not always properly addressed.

What's the solution?

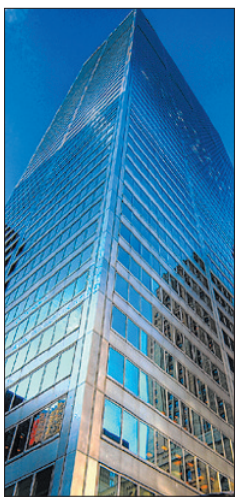
"Our theory — and we see this happening more and more in practice — is that you have an environmental view of sustainable solutions, you install transportation systems, you have a good social security system in the city, people enjoy that life," says Aurich.

"That brings effectiveness to the area, avoiding the negative effects of sprawl, and better defining where new lands should be allocated."

METRO WORLD NEWS

Canada has yet to embrace the benefit of high-speed trains.

Water infrastructure is crumbling and needs desperate repair.



Urban sprawl is at the root of sustainability problems.

The survey says...

- Experts in British Columbia see transit as the most important sustainability issue facing Canadian cities. Housing topped poverty and immigration as the key social concern. Poll respondents in Vancouver were the most optimistic in the country, with 58 per cent saying their quality of life is among the best

Act like you're at home

Ever had a moment when you're suddenly reminded of your own mortality? Well, this is the final instalment of Eco-Minded, and its proverbial life is flashing before my eyes. It's been a great three years, but I now realize I have yet to answer the question people so frequently ask me: "what's the most important thing I can do to help the environment?"

Given such a daunting question, I'd like to leave you with a simple and comforting answer: act like you're truly at home.

For millennia, our ancestors spent their lives in small family units, never travelling more than a few kilometres at a time. Now, most of us know thousands of people. We travel further everyday than our ancestors would in a month, and we purchase many complicated things. But all that complexity means it's now incredibly hard to see how our actions affect others—for good or for bad. Ironically, this can leave us feeling empty, unsettled, and disconnected.

Yet, from ecology to physics, science shows that we are all deeply and unfathomably interconnected. And despite the complexity, one thing we do know for sure is that perspective is key. How we choose to view the world determines how we act. Therefore, my suggestion is this: ground your actions, mindfully, in the broadest notion of home you can imagine. Be eco-minded. Being eco-minded means weighing choices in a different light, focusing not on quantity, but quality. Being eco-minded means putting aside the impulse of thoughtless consumption. Invest instead in your relationships — both with people and with nature. So, readers, while this column may be over, our journey is just beginning: join me on the path of eco-mindedness. After all, this is your home, too.

News in brief

IPHONE Some early buyers of Apple Inc.'s new iPhone 4 say holding the smartphone in a certain way causes the number of "bars" to plummet. Some say gripping the phone causes it to disconnect mid-call. Apple's fourth-generation iPhone has a stainless steel band around the edge that older models don't. It serves as the antenna, and covering part of the band seems to cause the intermittent problem. Apple calls such issues "a fact of life for every wireless phone," and recommends buying a case or changing the grip. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Paid to surf web?

Fed employees wasting time at work : Reports

Some Canada Revenue Agency workers have been spending far too much time browsing the Internet and sending offensive emails — and not enough time collecting taxes.

Internal reports show an average of 85 employees a year are disciplined for wasting their work days surfing the web, setting up sports pools, sending chain letters, promoting "illegal substances," sharing offensive cartoons and running pyramid schemes.

"[One] employee browsed the Internet an average of three hours and 32 minutes per day," says one investigation report from last July, or about half the shift.

"He installed four unauthorized software (programs) on his workstation."

Managers at the Canada Revenue Agency were lenient in their discipline of the employee because of his "good performance" — even though it was a second offence, says the report.

A year earlier, the same worker had been caught browsing the Internet an average of two hours and 25 minutes each day.

Another employee — found to be web-surfing an average of 83 minutes a day — was also given lenient treatment in view of his "remorsefulness."

The reports also show hundreds of "unacceptable" emails in workers' accounts, though the precise content is never described. However, many are referred to as pertaining to "union business."

These and other records outlining forbidden cyberbehaviour at the Canada Revenue Agency were obtained by The Canadian Press under the Access to Information Act.

Information about disciplinary measures was censored in the documents, which also do not disclose names.

Air Canada to add more flights to China

TRAVEL Air Canada expects to bring groups of Chinese tourists to Canada for leisure travel as the carrier doubles capacity to serve routes between Toronto and China this fall.

The airline said Friday that China's designation of Canada as an approved travel destination — opening the door to expanded air travel between the two countries — comes after many years of negotiations.

"This opens up a whole new market that we never had before," said Duncan Dee, CEO at Air Canada.

Air Canada said it will introduce daily flights between Toronto and three major Chinese cities: Shanghai, Beijing and Hong Kong. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Nadal's knee 'so much better'

Rafael Nadal's bothersome right knee held up fine during a 40-minute practice at the All England Club yesterday.

Walking briskly while carrying his racket bag after his light workout, Nadal told The Associated Press that his knee felt "good, good; not bad."

Toni Nadal, Rafael's uncle and coach, was more expansive, saying, "The knee is so much better" than it was Saturday, when the 2008 Wimbledon champion received treatment from a trainer during changeovers while coming back to beat No. 33-seeded Philipp Petzschner of Germany 6-4, 4-6, 6-7 (5), 6-2, 6-3 in the third round.

That was Nadal's second consecutive five-set victory, the first time he's ever had two matches go the distance this early at a major tournament.

The Spaniard went out to hit early yesterday afternoon during a star-studded training session. Roger Federer was perhaps six metres away on the court to Nadal's right, and Andy Roddick was to Nadal's left, while Novak Djokovic and Robin Soderling played a tiebreaker for fun nearby.

After yesterday's day off, Wimbledon resumes today with all 16 men's and women's fourth-round matches. The No. 2-seeded Nadal faces 66th-ranked Paul-Henri Mathieu of France.

"I hope and think he can play with no problem," Toni Nadal said. "We are nervous about the opponent, but not the knee at the moment."

His nephew's knees have been a long-standing issue.

Rafael Nadal skipped the grass-court Grand Slam tournament last year because of tendinitis in both knees, becoming only the fifth player in the history of an event first contested in 1877 to not defend his championship because of an injury.

Sports in brief

UFC If Chuck (The Iceman) Liddell fought his last fight at UFC 115 earlier this month, he at least has something for his retirement fund. Liddell, the former light heavyweight champion, earned $500,000 US for the fight, in which he suffered a first-round knockout which likely ended his career.

GRAND PRIX Red Bull driver Sebastian Vettel won the European Grand Prix yesterday, dominating the race from the pole position while teammate Mark Webber survived a spectacular crash. It was Vettel's second win of the season. He completed the 57 laps of the Valencia street circuit ahead of McLaren's Lewis Hamilton in second.

PGA Bubba Watson won for the first time on the PGA Tour, coming from six shots down to win the Travelers Championship in a three-way playoff. Watson sunk a three-foot par putt on the second playoff hole to beat Scott Verplank and Ryder Cup captain Corey Pavin, after they all finished at 14-under par.

NASCAR Jimmie Johnson surged past Kurt Busch with three laps left to win the Sprint Cup race at New Hampshire Motor Speedway. Busch grabbed the lead yesterday with about seven laps left when he nudged Johnson out of the way. Johnson and Busch quickly got side-by-side to energize what had been a lacklustre race.

England's steaming

Shock after goal not counted in loss to Germany

ROUND OF 16 RESULT

Germany 4 England 1

VS

Germany's latest World Cup victory over England will be remembered not for any of the brilliant goals, but for the one that didn't count.

Ask anyone — players, coaches, thousands of fans in the stadium and millions more watching on television — and there's little question that Frank Lampard put a shot in the net late in the first half that would have tied the score.

But referee Jorge Larrionda waved play on, and Germany used two second-half goals by Thomas Mueller for a 4-1 victory yesterday. The Germans are headed to the quarter-finals.

The English are shaking their heads in disbelief.

"It's incredible," England coach Fabio Capello said. "We played with five referees and they can't decide if it's a goal or no goal. The game was different after this goal. It was the mistake of the linesman and I think the referee because from the bench I saw the ball go (in)."

Germany coach Joachim Loew couldn't argue that point.

"What I saw on the television, this ball was behind the line," Loew said. "It must have been given as goal."

It wasn't.

"The goal was very important," Capello said. "We could have played a different style.

"We made some mistakes when they played the counterattack. The referee made bigger mistakes."

Larrionda and assistant referee Mauricio Espinosa were not made available to comment. FIFA said in a statement that it "will not make any comments on decisions of the referee on the field of play."

Soccer's rules-making panel agreed last March not to pursue experiments with technology that could help referees judge goal-line decisions.

Germany went up on goals by Miroslav Klose and Lukas Podolski before England's Matthew Upson made it 2-1 in the 37th minute.

Lampard's non-goal came a minute later. After the ball landed across the line, it spun back into the arms of Germany goalkeeper Manuel Neuer. Capello initially celebrated what he thought was an equalizer by clenching his fists and shaking his arms. But his face changed when he realized the goal had not been given. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Capello's future

- Steven Gerrard and Frank Lampard say they would like Fabio Capello stay on as England manager despite the team's early exit from the World Cup.

Suarez and Gyan early standouts

STARS Diego Maradona, Salvatore Schillaci, Zinedine Zidane. At almost every World Cup, there's one man whose burst of outstanding play captivates the globe.

At this year's competition in South Africa, the early candidates are Luis Suarez of Uruguay and Asamoah Gyan of Ghana. Both have led their teams to the quarter-finals and could be the ones to push their teammates all the way.

Uruguay had not been to the last eight of the World Cup since 1970, but Suarez took them there with his third goal of the tournament for a 2-1 win over South Korea.

"Fortunately, Suarez was able to score that spectacular winning goal," coach Oscar Tabarez said.

It is what makes the World Cup so special. Within a month, players can burst from the fringes of popular consciousness to centre stage.

KEVORK DJANSEZIAN/GETTY IMAGES

Ghana's Asamoah Gyan celebrates scoring his team's second goal Saturday against the United States.

Almost no one outside Italy knew of Schillaci before the 1990 World Cup but the reserve striker ended up the leading scorer with six goals, dragging the host nation to one penalty shootout from reaching the final in Rome.

This year, the race for the defining figure in a World Cup full of surprises is still wide open. Ajax's Suarez already has three goals and it will be tough to see a more thrilling one than his decider against South Korea.

He sidestepped two defenders in the driving rain and struck a right-foot shot from the edge of the area that curled just enough to beat the goalkeeper.

"Being young, I always dream of these types of moments," the 23-year-old forward said. "These moments we're experiencing are once in a lifetime."

It was the same for Gyan. He got the injury-time winner in a 2-1 victory over the United States, when he took a long ball from Andre Ayew over the defence, stayed upright despite a challenge and shot from 16 yards to send his country to the quarter-finals for the first time. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Disappointments

- The World Cup was seemingly set up for Cameroon's Samuel Eto'o to shine. It was the first time Africa hosted it, and banners bore his likeliness to market the event. Yet he was out when the first round was over.
- Chelsea's Didier Drogba also failed to come through for the Ivory Coast, although the broken right arm he suffered just ahead of the World Cup is a big factor.

Brazil and Chile are well-acquainted

ROUND OF 16 PREVIEW

Brazil vs. Chile

VS

Brazil and Chile won't have a lot of surprises when they play in the second round of the World Cup today.

The two South American countries have met dozens of times in recent years and already know what to expect from each other at Ellis Park Stadium.

Brazil has dominated the rivalry and arrives heavily favoured to advance, but this time the five-time champions will be facing a Chile team eager to show it can get past the round of 16 for the first time since its home tournament in 1962.

"We will have to play with intelligence," Brazil midfielder Gilberto Silva said yesterday. "We can't go after the win at all costs. We will need to be careful with their counterattacking, they know how to play and will try to attack, too."

Brazil hasn't lost to Chile in 10 years, a 3-0 result in a 2000 qualifier for the 2002 World Cup. It has won the past seven, outscoring Chile 26-3.

Tips for the job hunter

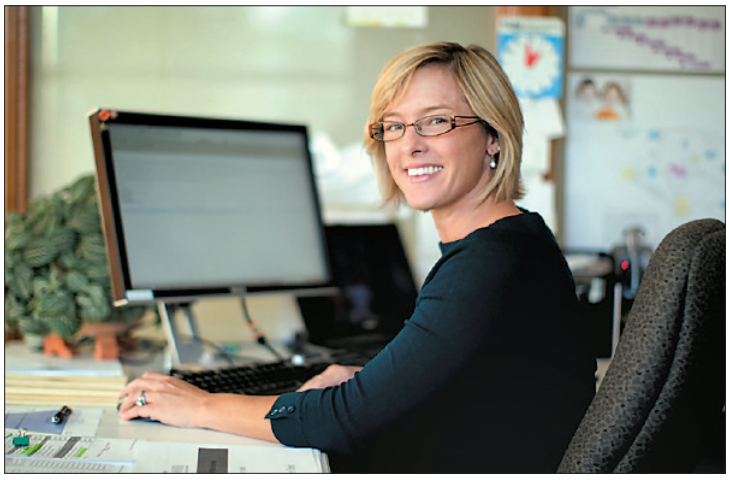
If the word "networking" makes you want to curl into a ball, Diane Darling, author of The Networking Survival Guide — now in its second edition — says it doesn't need to be that way. Here are some tips everyone can implement immediately:

Start from a position of strength

Too often people go out and try to randomly meet a bunch of new people. This is exhausting for many (especially for introverts) and often unproductive. Begin with your fan club. Who has helped you before, and vice versa?

Practice "hybrid networking"

It's most effective when you combine social networking and traditional networking (attending events, having a coffee, etc.). Like a hybrid car, there isn't a moment when the engine shuts off and restarts. If you don't like events, serve on a board and meet people that way. Networking is not a "one size fits all."



When you're looking for a job or aiming for a promotion, be aware that your profiles on social-networking sites will be perused.

You never know

The "kid" in jeans may be a millionaire, and the person in the business suit may be broke. It's unlikely your first impression of someone is always right. Be open-minded.

What goes online, stays online

This can be good or bad. If you're frustrated, don't say it online unless you're willing to have your grandmother or your kids read what you write.

Social-networking sites are researched before promotions are given or vendors are hired.

Be wise and be happy

Follow up

Most of your networking time and energy should be focused on following up with people. Even if they aren't spending money with you, they may be great referral sources or ambassadors.

Learning doesn't stop just because school is out

EDUCATION It's summertime, and as the saying goes, the living's easy. But, according to Dr. Nick Whitehead, founder and CEO of Oxford Learning, the living might be too easy — especially where students' brains are concerned.

"While it's important for students to take a break and enjoy their summer, it's more important that students continue to keep their brains challenged all summer long," he says. "The brain continues to see connections, grow, and process information even during the summer."

The brain functions much like muscles in the body: When not used properly, it begins to deteriorate.

"Without continual exercise over the summer, students' brains can lose learning momentum, which can lead to trouble in the fall," says Dr. Whitehead. "The summer should give kids a breather, not cause them to become mentally passive."

By continuing to learn over the summer months, students prevent their brain from losing the neural connections they built during the school year.

According to Dr. Whitehead, maintaining learning momentum is an easy process. In as little as one or two hours of active learning per week, students can retain all the information that they learned during the school year, and can even give themselves a considerable cognitive advantage over other students. Dog days at the office

Bob Page welcomed more than 50 dogs, two ferrets and the odd duck into his china shop last Friday. Lucky for him, his employees don't own bulls.

Jeanie Falcon works at her desk as her dog, Zola, lays nearby. Last Friday was the 12th annual Take Your Dog to Work Day.

Friday was Take Your Dog to Work Day, a campaign sponsored by Pet Sitters International to promote pet adoption. The group doesn't track how many workplaces participate, but said in the months leading up to it last year nearly 100,000 people visited takeyourdog.com.

Page's company, Replacements, Ltd., is the world's largest retailer of old and new china, crystal, silver and collectibles. And while the four-legged turnout will be bigger on Friday, it won't be that much different than any other day because employees at his plant are encouraged to bring pets every day.

The invitation on Page's company's front door reads: "Well-Behaved Pets Welcome."

"When you walk through here, people are smiling," explained Jeanine Falcon, vice-president of human resources.

The American Pet Products Manufacturers Association says about one in five U.S. companies allow pets in the workplace. Many of the companies are smaller, but a few of the larger ones are Google and Amazon.

Sophie, a five-year-old bulldog, not only goes to work every day with her owner, Rev. G.T. Schramm, rector of Trinity Episcopal Church, but she has a job and a title too.

As "special pastoral assistant," her job is to greet and to listen. "She has an uncanny way of knowing when somebody comes in here upset or out of sorts," Schramm said.

At Bare Necessities each dog owner made a donation and the company matched the money and sent it to a local shelter, said employee Kiera Lim. Lim and her husband, who also works for the company, brought their boxers, Pixie, 2, and Jax, 3.

"It's a day to blend your home life and your work life," Lim said. "If your pets are important to you, your co-workers have probably heard all about them. This is their chance to meet them." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Volunteering on the road towards college

VOLUNTEERING For many young Canadians, summer vacation means rest, relaxation and a break from the normal routine. Having some free time is also an opportunity to take on a new challenge. Volunteering gives young people the chance to gain some real-life experience that can be beneficial down the road in the job market, and if they continue on to college or university.

"Many young Canadians are interested in volunteering or taking a more active role in their community, but don't know where to start," says Rick Ashbee, national executive director of the Duke of Edinburgh's Award.

The Duke of Edinburgh's Award offers young people a balanced, non-competitive program of voluntary activities that encourages personal discovery and growth, self-reliance, perseverance, responsibility to themselves and service to their community. The program is open to all young Canadians between the ages of 14 and 25, regardless of circumstances or abilities. More info at dukeofed.org. NEWS CANADA

Fans remember King of Pop

Michael Jackson fans the world over paused to remember the man they called the King of Pop with songs, dances and prayers on the first anniversary of his death, a day Jackson's father marked by filing a wrongful-death lawsuit against the doctor charged with giving his son a lethal dose of sedatives.

GETTY IMAGES

Fans of the late pop star Michael Jackson pose with his star on the Hollywood Walk of Fame in Los Angeles over the weekend.

In Japan, hundreds of people lighted candles in Jackson's memory. In the Los Angeles suburb of Glendale, thousands filed silently through the gates of Forest Lawn Cemetery, where Jackson's body is entombed in the mausoleum. Some of them released white doves while others wept softly.

"He's been my idol all my life since I can remember. I feel like I haven't had closure," said Erick Dominguez, who travelled more than 100 kilometres to pay respects. As he spoke, the 37-year-old sales representative, his eyes hidden by sunglasses, began to weep.

Several of Jackson's relatives visited the mausoleum, which was off limits to the public. Brother Tito shook hands with fans as he arrived, and brother Jermaine rolled down a window and waved as the family left in a fleet of luxury vehicles.

In Jackson's hometown of Gary, Ind., Jackson's mother, Katherine, unveiled a monument in the front yard of the modest home where her children grew up.

"This past year has been very hard on the family," she said. "If it wasn't for the help of all of you, we wouldn't have made it through."

Jackson died June 25, 2009, at age 50, just before he was to begin a comeback tour. Dr. Conrad Murray has pleaded not guilty to felony involuntary manslaughter in his death. Authorities say Murray provided the entertainer with a mix of sedatives — including the powerful anesthetic propofol — that killed him.

As Jackson fans everywhere grieved, the entertainer's father, Joe Jackson, filed suit against Murray in federal court in Los Angeles.

The complaint, which seeks more than $75,000, accuses Murray of professional negligence and contends the physician tried to conceal his administration of propofol after Jackson's death. Propofol is normally administered only in hospital settings. Murray had been providing it to help him sleep after the physically grueling rehearsals for his comeback.

Murray attorney Charles Peckham said in a statement he expected his client's innocence to be "proven in a court of law."

Jackson's father is also fighting with his son's estate, seeking more than $15,000 a month. As Jackson's father went to court in Los Angeles, tributes to his son unfolded around the world.

One of the more raucous ones took place at Jackson's star in front of Grauman's Chinese Theatre on the Hollywood Walk of Fame. Fans blasted his music and danced energetically to the delight of tourists and passers-by on the crowded sidewalk. Many of the dancers were dressed as the King of Pop himself, wearing sequined gloves, black shirts and pants, white sox, black loafers and snappy looking Fedoras.

Farrah foundation keeps cancer battle alive

PEOPLE Farrah Fawcett's closest friends marked the first anniversary of her death by dedicating a cancer-research foundation in her name.

Alana Stewart, Ryan O'Neal, Tatum O'Neal and Redmond O'Neal were among guests at an intimate gathering Friday at the new offices of the Farrah Fawcett Foundation, which funds alternative cancer research and treatment methods and aims to improve the quality of life of those with the disease.

Fawcett, the Charlie's Angels star who detailed her battle with anal cancer in the 2009 documentary, Farrah's Story, died at 62 on June 25, 2009.

Stewart said Fawcett started her namesake foundation during her own struggle with cancer, and Stewart was determined to keep her friend's efforts alive.

"If I can help carry on Farrah's mission for the foundation, it's an honour for me," Stewart said. "I feel almost like she's a guardian angel watching over me, and I feel like she's smiling down on us and very happy that she died for a cause."

"She felt that she could help a lot of people and she could give a lot of people inspiration, courage and hope," Stewart continued. "That's why she did the documentary and that's why she started the foundation."

Ryan O'Neal said the first anniversary of Fawcett's death had been an emotional one for his family. Their 25-year-old son, Redmond, who has been dogged by drug problems and was jailed during his mother's final days, visited Fawcett's grave for the first time Friday.

Twi-hards take over L.A.

Hundreds of fans camp out for Eclipse premiere

Monica Siegel and her two friends dropped a total of $2,500 and flew hundreds of kilometres to camp out for four days on a gritty patch of sidewalk in downtown Los Angeles. On Thursday, it was all worth it.

Siegel, 22, nabbed a spot near the red carpet to see — and swoon over — the heartthrob stars of The Twilight Saga: Eclipse as they arrived at the premiere of the latest instalment in the blockbuster vampire series.

"It's been a big part of my life. I start caring about the characters a lot, and when they make the movies, you start caring about the actors that portray the characters," she said after frantically colouring a fan poster. "The love story is what drew me in."

Siegel, a college sophomore, spent more than $1,000 on airfare, camping equipment and a motel to make it to California with her two friends, whom she met through a Twilight Facebook page. The motel, at $60 a night, was for showers only: Siegel and her pals have been sleeping and living in their brand-new tent since Sunday.

"I've never gone camping in my life," Siegel said. "We're paying for a hotel room we can't sleep in — but we can shower!"

Siegel, 21-year-old Amanda Willis, and 25-year-old Melissa Moorhead are just three among thousands of so-called Twihards who have clogged the downtown premiere venue since early this week, camping out in a specially-designated tent city for a fleeting glimpse of stars such as Robert Pattinson, Kristin Stewart and Taylor Lautner.

Up to 9,000 people were issued wristbands for a chance to see the film. At least 550 early birds, like Siegel, were ensured a spot along the red carpet, which was black for the occasion.

The originals strike back

Amidst slew of sequels, new ideas ready to make mark

It's summertime at the movies, the season of getting-to-know-you-all-over-again as audiences reacquaint themselves with old screen pals such as Woody and Buzz Lightyear, Iron Man, Shrek and that Karate Kid.

Yet new ideas occasionally pop up even in Hollywood, the place that thrives on sequels, remakes, spin-offs and adaptations based on best-selling novels, TV shows, comic books or toys.

Among this summer's handful of original stories are Tom Cruise's Knight and Day, Angelina Jolie's Salt and Leonardo DiCaprio's Inception, from The Dark Knight director Christopher Nolan.

With old standbys such as Sex and the City 2, Robin Hood and The A-Team falling short of box-office expectations, fresh concepts play a bigger role in determining the success of Hollywood's summer.

Inception in particular has the industry and fans captivated, coming from a filmmaker with a track record for blockbuster entertainment that's also bold and smart.

Angelina Jolie stars in Salt.

Starring DiCaprio as a man using technology to sneak into people's dreams and steal their ideas, Inception arrives in theatres July 17 with the best buzz for an original story since James Cameron's Avatar last December.

At $2.7 billion worldwide, Avatar leads the box-office charts, hurtling past Harry Potter, Spider-Man and other franchise adaptations. "I would like to say we were very encouraged by the success of Avatar," Nolan said with a big laugh.

For many fans, Avatar was as groundbreaking a movie experience as one of the prime cinema adventures of Nolan's boyhood, Star Wars.

"Ever since I saw that film, whether I knew it or not, my ambition has been to give the audience that kind of experience," Nolan continued. "To create a world that they hadn't expected before and hadn't seen before and let them lose themselves in it."

So why does Hollywood keep coming back to the same old things? Simple. It pays better.

Most of the movies that draw colossal audiences are based on something that existed before. Familiarity sometimes can breed contempt as audiences tire of characters, but it's generally easier to get fans to buy tickets for the latest in a continuing saga.

"It really is up to the audience and critics. A lot of people jump on Hollywood for that, but the truth is, if they'll come, we'll make them," said producer Lorenzo di Bonaventura, whose credits include Transformers flicks and Jolie's upcoming spy thriller Salt.

Mel's ex gets restraining order

JUST ANOTHER DAY IN HOLLYWOOD: BREAKUP, BITTERNESS AND THE INEVITABLE RESTRAINING ORDER Oksana Grigorieva, Mel Gibson's ex-girlfriend — and the mother of his youngest child — has reportedly obtained a restraining order prohibiting him from coming within 100 yards of her, according to TMZ.

Sources say the action stems from a violent confrontation between the two in January, three months before they announced their split.

"She tried to protect his reputation, despite her fears of him and his verbal and physical abuse," a source says.

"She regrets having believed in his empty promises to obtain professional help to control his violent nature." Gibson reps deny he got violent with Grigorieva, whose reps will only say, "The true facts will be brought out in a court of law."
